NOBILITY.

By ALICE CARY.

Alice Cary was born near Cincinnati in 1820, and died in New York in 1870, Phe was the cider of two sisters, both of whom were famed for their sweet and homely perfect. The early lives of both were filled with hard physical labor and many privations. At fiteen Alice began writing, and by thity she had become nationally amous. She had a great sorrow in the loss of her first and only love, who, becoming estratiged, married another, and her poons usually reflected her pensive thought. Hornco Greeky said that her funeral was attended by more distinguished men and women than any other New York had over seen.

RUE worth is in being, not seeming; In doing each day that goes by, Some little good-not in the dreaming Of great things to do by and by. For whatever men say in blindness, And spite of the fancies of youth, There is nothing so kindly as kindness, And nothing so royal as truth.

We get back our price as we measure; We cannot do wrong and feel right; Nor can we give pain and gain pleasure, For justice avenges each slight. The air for the wing of the sparrow, The bush for the robin and wren, But always the path that is narrow And straight for the children of men.

We cannot make bargains for blisses, Nor catch them like fishes in nets, And sometimes the things our life misses, Help more than the things which it gets. For good lieth not in pursuing, Nor gaining of great nor of small; But just in the doing-and doing As we would be done by, is all.

Through envy, through malice, through hating Against the world early and late, No jot of our courage abating, Our part is to work and to wait. And slight is the sting of his trouble Whose winnings are less than his worth; For he who is honest is noble, Whatever his fortunes or birth.

"A hat with ostrich feathers," said Mrs. Pigeon.
"Where can I get them?" asked Mr.

Pigeon.
"From the tail of that ostrich walking across the field," said Mrs. Pigeon.
"Oh! he would not let me pull the feathers from his tail," cried Mr. Pigeon.
"Only men can do that."
"You surprise me," cried Mrs. Pigeon.
"Why, with that high hat, and polka-dot tie, and standing collar, and

LADIES' SHIRT-WAIST.

No. 6018. So generally becoming are the tucked or pleated walsts that their popularity shows no signs of waning. The reason is not far to seek. They are distinctive in style and not difficult of construction, then too, the season's fabrica are especially adapted to the mode. The heavy mercerized cottons look much better when laid in pleats than in gathers. The model shown here combines those newest features that go to make up a smart shirt-waist. A chic appearance is given to the waist by the combination of different width tucks, the alternate ones being a little wider than the others. Simulated box pleats are shown in both sleeve and the back, which carries out the idea of tucking, as employed in the front. The shirt-waist is made with a peptum. In fact, its use is imperative now in the day of heavy waistings as it does away with the bulkiness at hips and front, and any pattern made without this feature may be immediately stamped as old style, Sizes 32, 84, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches, bust measure. ernor Willard, each an alumnus of the Institute, will be present. There will be a meeting of the Executive Committee of the association to-morrow night for the purpose of concluding arrangements for the banquet.

There are over two hundred members of the association in this city, and not all the V. M. I. men are members. An effort is being made to enlist the old cadots, and the enrollment is swelling all the time.

The committee which has the arrangements for the banquet in charge are hopeful of being able to induce General Shipp, the superintendent of the Institute, to attend, but they have not received any influention that it will be possible for him to be with them.

Lieutenant-Governor Willard, who has an office in this city, is expected here to-morrow for the purpose of attending a meeting of the committee to make final arrangements for the feast.

ment adverse to the President, and is remarked upon as showing want of tact on the latter's part.

M. D. Tackett, a Republican, of Greensburg, Ind., visited the White House with Congressman Watson, at a moment when two gentlemen from St. Joseph, Mo., were introduced to the President, Addressing one of them, the President sald:

"Your have a pretty warm postoffice fight in St. Joseph, I believe?"

"Yes," said the Miseourian, "and that is what I want to talk with you about when you are at leisure."

"All right," said the President, "This is as good a place as any. What have you to say?"

The Missourian spoke in high terms of the candidate he favored, saying that he was equipped in every way for the office, was very popular with Republicans and Democrats allke, and was generally considered to be the best man for the place. The President listened till he got through, and then, looking him in the face, said: "Now you know and I know that Mr. — (mentioning the name of the other candidate) is the best man for the place and the most popular with the people."

The Missourian's face flushed scarted.
